Reflecting on Your Role

Considering your assigned role/identity within the community, answer the following questions in the order they appear. As you respond, consider how your answer to each question influences the way in which you would respond to the one that follows it:

- Who do you think might be impacted by this change? How so?
- Whose views/worldview on this topic seem relevant to you? Why?
- Of those represented, whose happiness, comfort, success, etc. do you care about most? Why?
- What questions might you have about this all? What do you wonder or need to know about the topic?
- What might your initial thoughts about this problem, question, or situation, and why?

© David Alan Smith (2024). Reproducible for classroom use with citation.

Questions for Town Hall Preparation

Consider the following as you prepare to participate in our town hall meeting. Keeping in mind your "role" in the community, sketch out your responses to these questions in a notebook so you can refer to them (though not necessarily read them verbatim) during the town hall:

- What do you most want others in the community to know or understand?
- What do you most want to know or learn from others in the community? What questions do you have for them?
- What stories have you read that are important to share with others in the community? Why are those stories important to you?
- What facts, statistics, or other data are important for others to hear about? Why do you feel those data are important?
- Considering your role in the community, what (if anything) do you think should be done about this problem, question, or situation? Why do you think that, and how might it be accomplished?

© David Alan Smith (2024). Reproducible for classroom use with citation.